Hillary, Wellesley aiming to empower foreign women

New institute aims to increase number of elected women worldwide ◗ Hillary Clinton launches initiative at Wellesley College ◗ Afghan delegate concerned for country's future

A group of young women from countries that have a history of repressing females got a pep talk yesterday from a former first lady who is now one of America's top leaders.

"All over the world women still face obstacles to cultural and legal participation," Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton told the women. "The world cannot miss out on the talents and contributions of half the population."

Clinton spoke during the start of a two-week pilot program taking place at Wellesley College. The first Women in Public Service Institute is helping 50 women, mostly from Middle Eastern countries, network and learn new tools needed to continue being leaders in their country, organizers said.

Those tools are imperative, institute organizers said, because women continue to be underrepresented. Clinton said that about 17 percent of those elected to Congress are women, which is lower than the 20 percent global average of women in parliamentary seats.

Madeleine Albright, a former secretary of state who, like Clinton, is a Wellesley alumna, is participating in the training sessions.

"When women participate in public service it strengthens democracy," Albright said.

But both Clinton and Albright acknowledged that, despite the Arab Spring revolutions, it would be difficult for the women attending the institute to easily incorporate what they learn into the workings of their country's government.

"Women deserve a full and equal voice."
MADELEINE ALBRIGHT, FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE

"We need leaders strong enough to be able to make their stand."
SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

"There is no one model or path. Ultimately our … delegates will know best what to see and how to move forward in their own cities," Albright said.

Naheed Ahmadi Farid, 27, the youngest member of the Afghanistan parliament, said she was satisfied with Clinton's support of her country. However, she added that she is not completely confident that what she learns at the institute will make a difference in her country when foreign troops leave in a few years.

Farid said her country is plagued by corruption and rigged elections and that many of the institute's participants live in countries where there is much violence against women.

1 Jackcilia Salathiel Ebere Ginanan was appointed the state minister of labor, public service and human resource development of South Sudan in 2010. Last year she helped form the Women's New Horizon community organization. Before that, when she was 18, she had to flee to Congo when fighting in her country reached close to her home. She was able to continue her education Uganda.

2 Hala Fahmi Jamal is a businesswoman involved in numerous community service associations in Bahrain. She serves as the chairwoman of On Island Tours, an American women's association. Several organizations and leaders, including the minister of development, have recognized her work.

3 Naheed Ahmadi Farid is, at 27, the youngest member of Afghanistan's parliament. She is seeking to form a new party that brings more unity and more female elected officials to the nation. Growing up under Taliban rule, she said the government burned her school during an attack on her city.

MBTA rolling out its mobile ticket app site

The T is one step closer to making a mobile ticket app a reality.

Yesterday, the MBTA launched a website for commuters who want to get on board with a program that will let them buy rail passes using an iPhone, Android or BlackBerry app.

"Fall is quickly approaching, and we want to involve customers as much as possible," said MBTA Director of Innovation Joshua Robin.

Customers who sign up will get updates on the program, and could be part of the trial run, which will be specific to a particular line.

Greig doesn't want alleged victims' families to speak

BOSTON. When Catherine Greig is sentenced today in federal court for harboring her boyfriend, alleged fugitive mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger, there will no doubt be family members of Bulger's alleged victims present to see her led away to jail.

But, in an objection notice filed yesterday, Greig's attorney is seeking to keep the families quiet. It is unclear what the judge will allow.

Typically at a sentencing hearing, victims or their family members are allowed to speak before a judge imposes a jail term. But Kevin Reddington, her attorney, says the family members aren't victims of Greig's crimes of harboring a fugitive and identity fraud. METRO

Officials seek solution to T funding crisis

Municipal and state leaders met yesterday in the heart of the regional transportation system to publicly call for a long-term, statewide solution to the transportation funding crisis.

"It is clear that reform alone is not enough to solve the financial crisis in transportation and deliver the quality service that our customers deserve," Secretary of Transportation Richard Davey said at a rally in South Station yesterday. "Today, let this call to action be a commitment to join together and choose to accept the generational responsibility and to fix our transportation system for the next generation."

The hour-long forum included remarks from several regional leaders, who agreed that the push for a long-term solution needs support from business, environmental and transportation communities.

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino asked people to make their voices heard, "not just today, but every day."

Marc Draisen, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council spoke of fiscal responsibility. "We need more money, we need to spend that money wisely, we need to invest it equitably, in this region and throughout the state," he said.

"Where do they want to get the revenue? Do they want to do the gas tax? ... Or are they afraid to talk about it because it will scare people away?"

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ "It will take a sustained effort by all of us," Menino said. "We need to work together."

What we need

Leaders at South Station Forum agreed that:

- A strong transportation system is essential to the well-being of every community.
- Inadequate funding has led to crumbling infrastructure and crippling debt.
- The state needs more funding for a comprehensive solution.
- Investments must be statewide.

Witness accuses Sandusky of sex abuse as trial starts

Former Penn State defensive coordinator branded as 'predatory pedophile' Could face 500-year sentence

PATRICK SMITH/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky walks into the Centre County Courthouse before the first day of his child sex abuse trial yesterday, in Bellefonte, Pa.

The first witness called in the Jerry Sandusky child sex abuse trial testified yesterday that the former Penn State assistant football coach treated him like "his girlfriend" when he was a young teenager, showering together and engaging in oral sex.

The testimony by the 28-year-old man came after jurors heard opening statements from prosecutors and the defense as the closely watched trial got under way in Pennsylvania.

The prosecution branded the 68-year-old Sandusky a "predatory pedophile" and said his young victims remained silent only out of fear and shame. Defense lawyer Joe Amendola told the seven women and five men of the jury that Sandusky was a naive man filled with love and affection for young people.

Sandusky faces 52 counts of sexual abuse against 10 boys.

"Jerry Sandusky, in my opinion, loves kids so much he does things that none of us would ever think of doing," Amendola said.

Sandusky faces 52 counts of sexual abuse against 10 boys. If convicted, the former Penn State football defensive coordinator could be sentenced to more than 500 years in prison.

The opening witness called by prosecutors told jurors he met Sandusky when he was 13 years old, in 1996 or 1997. He said his relationship with Sandusky evolved from showering together after workouts at Pennsylvania State University facilities to the coach putting his hand on his leg while driving in a car and then oral sex, as well as being lavished with gifts.

"It was basically like I was his girlfriend. It was the way I would treat my girlfriend," the man testified.

A handwritten letter allegedly sent by Sandusky to this witness was placed into evidence yesterday. "I know that I have made my share of mistakes," it read. "There has been love in my heart. My wish is that you care and have love in your heart."

Sandusky is accused of using the Second Mile, a charity he founded in 1977, to prey on needy young boys. REUTERS

Europe bailout taking its toll on US markets

U.S. stocks fell yesterday as Europe's aid package for Spanish banks did little to alleviate investor concerns about the region's finances and the slowdown in the wider global economy.

Spanish bond yields rose as a bailout of up to $125 billion for the country's struggling banks failed to quell concerns that Madrid may be locked out of funding markets and forced to seek external help. Some were also concerned that the new debt would subordinate existing bond holders.

"This is a realization that Spain, while providing money for its banks, is going to add to its debt-to-GDP ratio, and it's going to potentially subordinate some of the current Spanish sovereign debt, which does not make those bondholders happy," said Paul Zemsky, head of asset allocation at ING Investment Management.

"They're borrowing more money, not doing anything about growth," Zemsky said. "Today we're not worried about Spain's banking system falling off a cliff, but other than that, nothing has changed."

Investors fear a crisis in Spain would compound the currency bloc's troubles before June 17 elections in Greece, which many think could lead to Greece's exit from the euro zone.

The worries come at a time when economies the world over are showing signs of slowing. China's inflation, industrial output and retail sales all flagged in May. It was the second straight month of sluggish growth. REUTERS

Greek see a light

The friendly terms of an international rescue for Spain have encouraged Greek politicians to believe they can extract a better deal from creditors.

▶ In Greece, the radical, leftist SYRIZA party seized on the lenient Spanish bailout as evidence that austerity measures demanded of Athens in return for a European financial rescue plan had failed.

▶ "Since more countries are in the game, it's good for us because we will have the grounds to negotiate over better terms," said Eleni Karakoussi, 31, who said she intended to vote for SYRIZA.

Report: Dad's housework not equal to mom's

NEW YORK. Fathers of America, you may consider yourselves indispensable, but a new survey says you're only worth about one-third as much as mom around the house.

In fact, you are not even keeping up with inflation.

Insurance news and data website Insure.com released its annual Father's Day Index yesterday, an attempt to calculate the value in wage terms of the work a father typically does around the house.

> 77¢ Research shows women make less than men for doing the same hours at the same jobs — 77 cents on the dollar, on average.

The value this year was some $20,248, about $1,000 less than the inflation-adjusted value of 10 years ago.

By comparison, a typical mother's household work came in at $60,182 — nearly three times greater.

The website matched government wage data to 13 different fatherly household tasks to calculate the index, including barbecuing (matched to "cooks"), killing spiders ("pest control") and mowing the lawn ("grounds maintenance workers"). REUTERS

OLYMPICS HAVOC HURTS THE POOR

Global Games add to the misery of the impoverished communities they were supposed to save Profits have taken precedence Learn about the quadrennial event's dark side: From predatory landlords to mass evictions

"He wanders around Westfield, dreaming about what he can't have," Carole Vincent says of her autistic son. "I'm not confident about finding a new place for him."

The glamor of the Olympic site's new shopping center is as close as Ashley Vincent, 23, can get to the $15.55 billion renewal program in East London. He has just been evicted at short notice from his apartment near the site, along with three disabled housemates. His landlord has chosen to chase a fortune from short-term rentals. Demand has pushed rental prices up to 400 percent higher around the site, and residents like Ashley lose their homes.

In Newham, London's most deprived borough, "hundreds" of local people have been evicted ahead of the Games, Anchor House shelter director Keith Fernett told Metro. Newham Council drew criticism in April over a plan to relocate 500 people to Northern England, a "pragmatic" policy which Fernett expects to see more of.

The evictions have inflamed a severe housing shortage, which had already forced people into desperate conditions. There are an estimated 10,000 living in illegal extensions in Newham, "sheds and garages are being [leased]," says Fernett. Overcrowding is severe: "We've seen 38 living in a house."

Sim Sekhon, director of Legal 4 Landlords eviction specialists, confirmed to Metro that business is booming, and that even the previously comfortable are being dragged down. "London is the majority of our business now. Evictions are certainly increasing in the Olympic hot spots. Landlords are cashing in on short-term [rentals] and people who have done nothing wrong are replaced. Even the middle classes are being affected."

The Olympic legacy was supposed to solve the housing crisis and regenerate rundown areas. London Mayor Boris Johnson recently claimed 10,000 "affordable" homes would come out of the Games. But the only new housing being built in Newham is high-end, far beyond the means of its cash-strapped community.

KIERON MONKS
letters@metro.us
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

▶ The Olympics are big business, but the downtrodden don't tend to benefit. Complaints from residents to local government have failed, as councils say they have no power to regulate private landlords. "There is nothing to prevent soaring rents because there is no protection for tenants," Shadow Housing Minister Jack Dromey told Metro. "The Olympics are a triumph for Britain but it's wrong that thousands of local people are paying the price for it."

Another summer of rage?

LONDON. Riots are the No. 1 threat to the Olympics, according to the Home Office director-general of security. Last year, 15,000 people participated in the worst public disorder Britain has seen in 20 years, in which five people died and several major cities were reduced to chaos.

The potential for new unrest remains, with the U.K. back in recession, and unemployment and poverty growing. The Olympic site is located in the East end of London, which saw some of the most violent riots last year. Several activist groups are planning to target the Olympics for protests, such as the extremist Coalition of Resistance. MWN

By the numbers

More than 2 million people have been displaced by the last six Olympic Games, the Centre on Housing Rights and Evictions claim.

1.25M

Beijing is the worst offender, according to the Switzerland-based group, having forcibly moved 1.25 million residents for the 2008 Games.

It is estimated that 720,000 people were displaced in 1988, in Seoul, South Korea, including through mass demolitions and imprisonment.

30K

For the 1996 Games in Atlanta, up to 30,000 lost their homes when public housing was demolished.

100s

More than 600 families were evicted in Barcelona 1992, and hundreds of Greek gypsies were forced out in 2004.

60 seconds with ...

'WE WANT TO ... PROSECUTE ROGUE LANDLORDS'

Metro spoke with David Cox, policy officer of the National Landlords Association:

Are landlords evicting and exploiting more tenants in the Olympic boroughs?
Most of our landlords want long-term tenancies. We advise landlords that if they have good tenants to keep them instead of making a lot of money for a few weeks and then having no guarantee of finding replacements. We are aware of some unscrupulous landlords, but we could call them criminals not landlords, taking advantage of vulnerable people. That is a rogue minority that taints the majority, in the bottom 5 percent of the sector.

▶ Cox

How much more can landlords make from short-term lets?
We've heard four times as much in the Olympic boroughs. At this time hotel capacity is still only 80 percent so when that's exhausted there could be higher prices.

Does the sector need more regulation?
Private renting collapsed last time there were rent controls in the 1960s. We want to see local authorities prosecute rogue landlords. Intelligence-led enforcement is the best way to root them out.

Tom Brady shows love for his UGGs

GETTY IMAGES

"People have always thought about [UGG] as a slipper line, but it's so much more than that," Brady says.

We didn't think men were into UGG boots, but apparently they are — so much so that the Australian shoe brand just launched its first UGG for Men store on New York City's Madison Avenue. The shop stocks footwear (with and without the trademark shearling), outerwear, accessories and a collection of leather items for dudes. On hand at last week's grand opening was the new face of UGG for Men, Patriots quarterback (and self-proclaimed "slipper guy") Tom Brady, who sang to us his praises for manly UGGs.

We tend to think of UGGs as women's shoes. How did this collaboration come about?

I had the slippers for a long time, all through college. It's a California brand — [and since] I was a California kid, I had known something about it. When [the UGG team] came to us a few years ago and said, "This is what we're launching, do you guys wanna be a part of it?" we jumped right in. There's so many different products. It is a cool brand, and it's a lot of fun to be a part of something that's really grown as much as it has over the last few years.

"At some point you just have to say, whatever you're comfortable with doing, enjoy it."
BRADY

Where do you wear your UGGs?

I wear them all the time: to stadiums, to work. I wear them out at night with friends — not the slippers, obviously, but there's quite a few other products that really go well at night. Especially at the football stadium: I've given away a lot of slippers over the years to teammates. When you walk in ... and half the team's wearing the slippers that you gave them, it's pretty cool.

Gotta ask you about your Met Gala hairdo — it got some mixed reactions. Whose idea was it?

It was kind of my idea. Honestly, I don't take it super seriously. I had a few friends who were really mad at me, like, "What are you doing?" [Laughs] I laugh it off. I had fun with it. It was a fun night. At some point you just have to say, "Whatever you're comfortable with doing, enjoy it."

Will you grow your hair long again?

I don't know, I like to keep changing it. It's fun. Guys can do that — it's a little easier for us than the girls.

An unlikely friendship

French superstar Omar Sy discusses his latest film, 'The Intouchables,' which took Europe by storm

French actor Omar Sy is hoping his recent hot streak continues. His latest film, "The Intouchables," is already a hit across Europe, in Japan and in its native France, where it has become the second most successful French film of all time and earned Sy a Cesar Award for Best Actor — beating out "The Artist" star Jean Dujardin. Now, Sy is hoping to find similar success in the United States, even with an American remake already on the way.

How did you come to be involved with the project?
I had already done three films with the directors, Olivier Nakache and Eric Toledano. As the films went on, the roles that I would play were more and more important, and at the end of the third film they said, "We want to write something for you as the main character," and they showed me the documentary on the real story and said, "If you're in we do it, and if you're not then we don't move forward." And I did.

How do you find the balance between creating your own character and telling someone else's story?
I don't have a formal actor's training, so I went a lot with instinct and what felt right. I would be like a horse galloping, and the directors would be handling the reins and reining me back in. So that's how I found the balance.

The success in France has been fantastic. How do you feel about heading into the U.S. with it?
Because of its huge success not only in France but in countries like Italy, Germany — you know, all over Europe — we're really hoping that in the States it will also have some impact and have some success, because now we've gotten used to all that success and attention.

Synopsis

"The Intouchables" tells the story of a rich quadriplegic who, when requiring a full-time caregiver, hires and befriends a man previously convicted of robbery.

▶ Sy beat out "The Artist" star Jean Dujardin for France's most prestigious acting award.

Q&A

The movie opens with you behind the wheel of quite nice Maserati Quattroporte. Did you get to do any of the driving yourself?

Of course. That was a condition for making the film — otherwise I wouldn't have done it. [Laughs]

There's also been talk of an American remake.
Yes, there will be an American remake — but I don't know when it will film or which actors will star in it.

Who would you cast in the remake?
I would probably cast Colin Firth for Francois' role. For my role, I don't know. If you want to keep the same sort of balance that you have in the film, with the character being an immigrant, you wouldn't use an African-American in the remake, which is of course the obvious first impulse — but you would go with a Hispanic actor, because there you have that relationship of immigration. Or Meryl Streep is always a good choice. [Laughs]

Lawrence-Lightfoot closes a book about closing the book

During recent public and radio appearances, audiences haven't interrogated Sarah Lawrence-Lightfoot about her latest book, "Exit: The Endings That Set Us Free," so much as offer their confessions to the Harvard sociology professor. The author's latest is a collection of intimate interviews with people from all walks of life, all of whom discuss longing, leaving and letting go, and Lawrence-Lightfoot claims that even at cocktail parties, people feel compelled to share their stories of exit. Without pretension but with pride, she says the book provokes that. "When people bring the book to have me sign it, the lines take forever because everyone has to tell their story," she laughs. "They're telling stories that are particular to them but obviously universal — about the death of a parent or a child, losing work, divorce, bullying." These themes cut across racial, cultural and social boundaries.

Everyone has an exit story,

BACHRACH PHOTOGRAPHERS

or even multiple stories. In what could be an infinitely long book on the topic of finality, Lawrence-Lightfoot narrowed four dozen stories down to 11, according to "which held the most poignancy, particularly as they were paired one with the other and [those that], if we look through the lens of exit, allowed us to see some fundamental human experience differently." She breaks down the encounters with her subjects — a gay activist, an Iranian ex-pat and a former priest, to name a few — into six categories: tales of finding and embracing our home, voice, freedom, wounds, yearning and grace.

These abstract ideas, which seem more in line with a self-help manual than a sociological survey, become solidified in each of the storyteller's shared experiences. Lawrence-Lightfoot gleans wisdom from their sometimes joyful, sometimes painful exits, yet the book never solicits direct advice. "The lessons are embroidered [into the stories]," she contends. "They aren't presented as didactic prescriptions. They're presented as the insights of the protagonists." Additionally, she highlights the anchoring analogies her interviewees use to describe their complex exits — like "peeling an onion," "joining the dance," "a merry-go-round" — mnemonic tools that resonate in their profound simplicity.

But the aim of the narratives isn't only that we recall and compare past endings in our own lives; it's also to "reframe" how we perceive exits as they happen, to call attention to why it is that they've occurred before looking out for the next beginning or new opportunity. Lawrence-Lightfoot urges readers to attend to the moment of exit and "use [it] as a moment of reflection, as a moment of propulsion." Being purposeful and aware of how we make even the smallest ritual exits can be helpful "as we get ourselves prepared to make the larger exits in our lives."

Finishing this book marks a momentous ending for Lawrence-Lightfoot. In its wake, she must confront an "intergenerational" exit — accepting her children's independence while still participating in their lives — as well as how to eventually, gracefully, end her four-decade career at Harvard. Like the exits her subjects recount, she anticipates that her own will be layered. "I know there will be a lot of pain and loss, as well as liberation and relief." The book has also forced her to think about the next chapter in a literal sense. "What do you write after a book called 'Exit?'" she asks, rhetorically. So long as she gives a voice to the stories we're hungry to tell, the possibilities are endless.

GINA ANGELOTTI
gina.angelotti@metro.us

Q&A: Closure

We're often afraid of exits — but when they happen, we want them to be neat, to make sense. What are your thoughts on closure?

There's a moment when it all seems to come together and we say, "I'm out of here." But it's not as if you make the leap of faith and it's done. It's messy and iterative. Maybe you want that to feel like closure, but as you look back, you recognize that this has been long in coming. There were signs along the way that were blurred and unclear but were important precursors of this very moment. As you move on, you realize they continue to reverberate in you. The wounds are still there and they can be relived at any time. ... Closure, I don't think it's the right word. I think clarity that comes from that moment when we know it's time to walk — that's important.

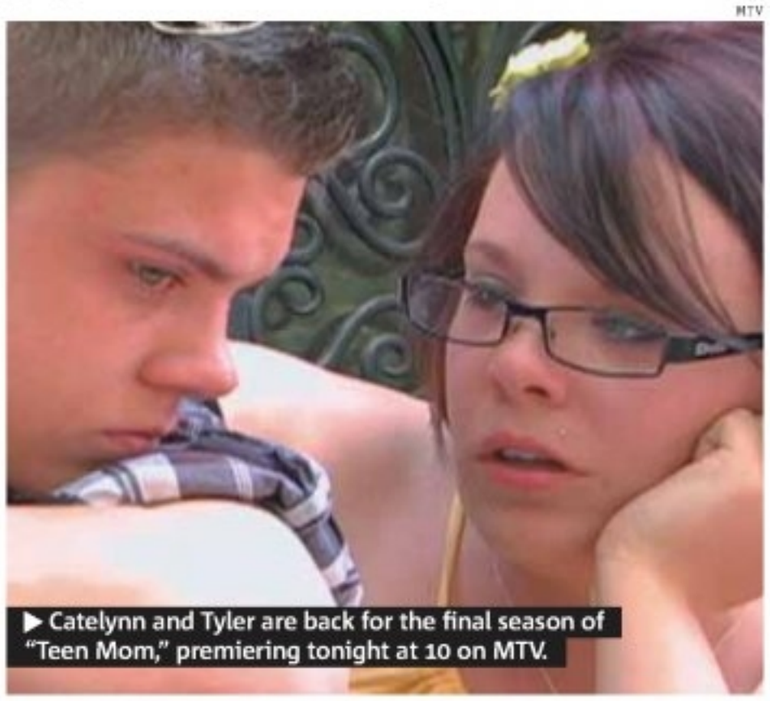
Catelynn and Tyler talk 'Teen Mom'

The couple on their upcoming nuptials, choosing adoption and living up to their fans' expectations

Since first appearing on MTV's "16 and Pregnant," Michigan-based duo Catelynn Lowell and Tyler Baltierra have shared the highs and lows of their decision to put their daughter Carly, now 3, up for adoption. Now the engaged twosome are back for the final season of "Teen Mom," and they told us what we can expect from them this season and beyond.

MTV



▶ Catelynn and Tyler are back for the final season of "Teen Mom," premiering tonight at 10 on MTV.

What's on tap for this season?
Tyler: I have to say, this is gonna be the most intense season.
Catelynn: A lot of stressful things go on. In my story, [Tyler's dad] Butch and my mom get into a very severe thing and it's not good.
Tyler: But we also get to —
Catelynn: See Carly again, and we have a very hard breakdown afterward.
Tyler: That was much needed because we haven't —
Catelynn: Cried in a long time.
How was it to see Carly again?
Tyler: Really good.
Catelynn: She's so big and she loves us. She knows who we are now.
Tyler: [She's a] very confident, independent little girl. We were visiting her and I was trying to race her a bit and she was like, "I'm the leader, stop!"
How do you envision your relationship with her as she gets older?
Tyler: At a certain age, we're gonna let her make the decision: [Do] you wanna continue the visits that you've had with us, or do you just wanna —
Catelynn: Live your life?
Tyler: It would be really hard for me and Catelynn if Carly decided [she was] better off not seeing us, but I think at the end of the day it should be her decision. I don't want her to think the visits are forced or she's obligated to have contact with us.
What about you two: Have you set a wedding date?
Tyler: We set a wedding date, it is the 13th of July, 2013.
Will Carly be there?
Catelynn: We are hoping. We're gonna ask and just see. I don't want her at the reception, just when we say our vows.
Tyler: I really, really want her there. I really feel that Carly's the reason why we work so hard to keep our relationship going strong, and I feel like if it wasn't for her, we wouldn't even be getting married.
Did you ever second-guess your decision to choose adoption?
Catelynn: Of course you always miss her, and you always want her to be in your life, but if I did parent, I probably wouldn't be where I am now. I probably wouldn't have graduated high school, I probably wouldn't have my own house.
Tyler: [The] decisions you make guide your destiny.
You're in college together. How's that going?
Tyler: I just finished my freshman year. I'm going for social working for at-risk youth.
Catelynn: I started my freshman year. I'm going to be a pregnancy counselor, working with girls in adoption planning.
If you could sign up for "Teen Mom" again, would you?
Catelynn: Yes. We showed people a different option and we educated them: Adoption's not like how it was 20 years ago.
Tyler: That's the whole reason why we did "16 and Pregnant," [to] show people how adoption really works. And it's turned out to be inspiring to people.
Catelynn: And by far, MTV are the only people who have had a true vision on adoption.
Tyler: "Juno" was not right.
Catelynn: Not at all. She gets out of the hospital — "Oh, I'm gonna go play guitar with my boyfriend and I'm all happy."
Tyler: She's very nonchalant, and she doesn't ever break down. And the adoptive dad hitting on her …
Catelynn: It was not real at all. MTV are the only people that have ever shown adoption —
Tyler: Accurately.

Nobody's perfect

A lot of viewers say you're their favorite couple. Do you feel pressure to be the perfect couple for your audience?

Tyler: Absolutely not. I mean, yes, we have a very good relationship, and I think communication is the thing that keeps us so strong. I don't hold anything back: You're pissing me off, I'm gonna tell you — and vice versa.

Catelynn: We are a good couple. We're not perfect. We still bicker.

Tyler: We bicker, we get on each other's nerves. People are like "Oh, they're so perfect," and no, we're not, I'll tell you that.

Changing the eating habits of America's youth

It's a tall order, but experts are pushing for reform Start the process at home — how about with a family dinner tonight? Or, start a garden

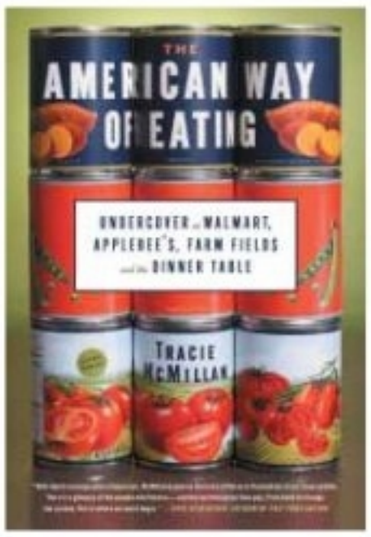
Our nation's childhood obesity problem is really an epidemic: One in three American children are overweight or obese, according to the American Heart Association. We asked Tracie McMillan, author of "The American Way of Eating," for ideas out of the (junk food) box.

How do you change bad eating habits?

This idea that we're going to get through to people by criticizing them for the food they choose — you can be right all you want, but I don't think anyone's going to listen. Share what you're excited about. That makes people open to change.

How can we change the stigma of healthy eating as something that only the wealthy can afford to do?

Part of what makes eating healthily feel like it's for elites is that elites have the money to pay someone else to do things for them. Cooking is the most important key to self-sufficiency. It's important to know how to cook well enough so that you don't have to rely on boxes. Hamburger Helper is actually more expensive than making it from scratch. Why not set up something in advance that's just as easy, cheaper and better for you? People get so stressed out that they don't think about what they're making. Do you fix that by making better Hamburger Helper, or do you empower people to know how to cook on their own?



What are ways to encourage people with low incomes to choose to shop at farmers markets versus chain stores?

The business model of farmers markets makes it hard for working-class folks to go because their work schedules tend to be more erratic than professionals with office jobs. That said, there are matching incentive programs for people who use food stamps. Farmers [should consider] doing an item-by-item comparison between supermarket flyers and prices at the market. The general perception is that if the farmer's market is too expensive, it's better to save the hassle and go to the supermarket. What if there's a way to show that the markup is literally 5 cents a pound at the farmers market for something fresher?

What are some key items you suggest to buy direct and fresh that fit into a small budget?

If you change the way that you cook with meat, you can afford to buy fine quality. I use meat as seasoning. High-quality bacon gives a better heft to the taste of beans. Also, go to a place where they'll sell the backs and neck of chickens, which are cheap and great for making stock. [It] will make rice and vegetables taste phenomenal and filling. And [buy] produce in season. In tomato season, you can get insane amounts of them cheap. I puree and freeze things — not everything has to be superfresh. Be strategic about what you can afford.

Everyone's invited to the party

RE: "PARTY LOYALTY SEEMS A BIT OUT OF WHACK": Since Joseph Connell misstated the Republican Party platform to make it seem like Leah Thompson's loyalty was poorly placed, let me correct a few things. First, the Republican Party wants lower taxes for everyone, not just "the top 0.1 percent." Did Mr. Connell forget that the Bush tax cuts that Obama extended were for everyone? Second, Republicans don't want to "end the social safety net," they want to change the entitlement programs to make them sustainable and reduce government waste and fraud in the social safety net. We don't have an endless supply of money to continue paying for the entitlement programs in their current form forever. Lastly, Republicans don't want companies "to poison and exploit our children." They want smart regulation, not over-regulation. Contrary to what some people believe, all regulation is not good regulation or even necessary. Even President Obama ordered a review of regulations on Jan. 18, 2011, to reduce "the costs of cumulative regulations." Mr. Connell, at least get the facts straight before trying to disparage someone for supporting the Republican party.

Sweatin' to the old regimes

RE: "LIBERALS WANT US ALL IN SWEATSHOPS": I suspect Richie Tiemann is deliberately misunderstanding the point about sweatshops. No one in their right mind would work under those conditions, unless it was the only option besides starvation. Tragically, that's the choice facing much of the residents of many countries where Tiemann's preferred policies are in place. Tiemann's lack of empathy is appalling.

JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

"The president finally said he supports gay marriage after all his time in office."

The fact of the matter is that merely supporting something verbally does not in itself change anything. Why do people fall for such rhetoric? Should one assume that words are all we need to further our causes?!

PETER MOLLE, VIA E-MAIL

Don't forget, Sunday is Father's Day

RE: "FATHERS NEED TO SUPPORT THEIR BABIES": This is in response to Cher Hearn's letter about fathers needing to support their babies. There are plenty of fathers who do take care of their kids. But it's also the case that some vindictive mothers deprive their kids' fathers from seeing or taking care of them. They claim they're the victim or the father walked out. Little does she know that some mothers dangle the kids and threaten the fathers. They say they can't see their kids if they don't get back together with them or they want more money for child support (the court takes 17 percent from the father's paycheck). The court thinks the mother is fit to take care of the kids.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. It behooves you to try to reduce your expenses when it comes to nonessential interests. If you really mean business, you won't make any purchases or commitments that you can't afford.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Be able to determine the difference between aggressiveness and assertiveness. Attempting to bulldoze your way through situations that affect your career will only make matters worse.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Don't be so quick to believe everything that you hear. Information that comes to you from questionable sources could be distorted or biased — or both.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If you hope to profit in some manner at the expense of another, examine your motives and have one heck of a good reason. Operating along the wrong lines will derail you.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. When in a partnership arrangement, have an understanding in advance as to who is responsible for what. Without any ground rules, the venture could veer off course.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Fail to approach your work in a positive manner and you'll make what you have to do much more difficult then it actually is. Make sure that every detail is covered, but smile.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you knowingly go against the odds, don't be surprised if you have to pay the consequences. Lady Luck isn't likely to be around when you need her the most.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Let sleeping dogs lie — and don't bring up any old, unresolved domestic issues when everyone is trying to relax. It could open Pandora's box.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Even if you think the criticism you're offering is very constructive, the recipient of your remarks might feel differently and deeply resent your input. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Financial conditions are likely to be a mixed bag for you at this juncture.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. There is likely to be far too much outside interference for you to do your job as smoothly as you like. Throwing a fit won't solve a thing, but it can make matters worse.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If you allow yourself to be influenced by past events, it could put a damper on fresh developments. Obsessing over yesterdays only inhibits new successes.

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Brand is going for this look, thank you

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ Brand might have to lose the aviators for his next role.

He was on home turf and brought his mom as a date, but even still, Russell Brand couldn't catch a break at the London premiere of "Rock of Ages." While the comedian walked the red carpet for his new film, fans yelled that he looked like "Jesus" and a "homeless person."

Brand — like most people confined to skin-tight jeans and ornamental cowboy boots — didn't risk getting in a fight, instead taking it as a compliment. "I'd like to play Jesus, and wasn't he homeless for a while too?" he answered, according to U.K. newspaper The Mirror.

He also admitted that his role as a rocker with a wild streak wasn't that much of a stretch. "When I was lying on the toilet floor, I thought, 'Hello, here we are again on my own,'" says Brand, who struggled publicly with drugs and alcohol before sobering up.

Tom Cruise on rocking out

While Brand essentially plays some version of himself in "Rock of Ages," professional pretty boy Tom Cruise spent a little more time in the makeup chair getting into character, and it freaked out daughter Suri.

"When I had the eyeliner and the painted nails, [Suri] was a little taken aback by it," the actor told Ryan Seacrest on his radio show yesterday morning. "She was like, 'What's happening to my dad?'"

Poor kid! This image is right up there with drunk, homeless Jesus.

Lohan may face lawsuit

Not surprisingly, the truck driver involved in a car crash with Lindsay Lohan over the weekend has hired a lawyer.

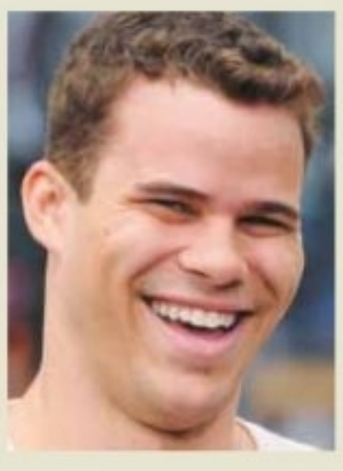
According to TMZ, he claims he saw a doctor on Sunday but would not disclose the injuries he suffered after the actress slammed into the back of his 18-wheeler.

We get that it's not easy to give Lindsay a break (especially on a slow news day), but come on — her pocket-size Porsche is in the same league as a chubby rollerblader.

Humphries meets his match

Kris Humphries is meeting with the FBI this week to discuss texts and e-mails from his not-girlfriend, Myla Sinanaj, reports RadarOnline. The former Mr. Kardashian believes Sinanaj is attempting to extort him after a casual relationship ended.

"Myla is truly acting like woman scorned. She didn't get what she wanted from Kris and threatened to go to the press and ruin him if he didn't pay her off," a source tells the site. "Kris had to go to the FBI because he truly believes that she is capable of making up crazy lies about him. Kris will fully cooperate with the FBI and do anything that is asked of him."



Wait — this girl wants money and publicity from him after a short, questionable relationship? Kris, this might be as close as you get to a soul mate.

The party don't start until Joan Collins walks in

1 Tony Awards host Neil Patrick Harris got to wind down at the after party with partner David Burtka after Sunday night's show.

2 Emily Blunt is living our sitcom dream life: She's married to Jim (aka John Krasinski) and is hopping around Europe promoting "The Five-Year Engagement" with Jason Segel.

3 Yes and yes: Joan Collins was on the red carpet at Sunday's Monte Carlo TV Festival.

4 Nick Jonas and John Stamos were looking mischievous at the Tony Awards after-party.

5 We wish cuties Emma Stone and Andrew Garfield sat next to each other more often. The "Amazing Spider-Man" co-stars attended the Tony Awards together on Sunday night.

6 Lady Gaga looked amazing at the Brisbane Airport yesterday. But then again, we're pretty sure she had unlimited hot towels.

Barbados on a budget

▶ Palm trees, catamarans and horses on the beach? This must be Barbados!

- If you follow these simple tips, you can have a fun vacation without spending a month's pay
- We suggest the all-inclusive package, but with day-trips to the swanky places

The phrase "budget vacation" is enough to strike fear in a traveler's heart. But an affordable holiday in Barbados doesn't have to sacrifice comfort, fun or even a little luxury.

Go Blue

Everyone has their favorite website for vacation bargains, but check in at JetBlue Getaways for special offers and discounts in addition to the company's Getaways Best Price Guarantee, which promises the lowest available prices. JetBlue flies daily nonstop to Barbados from JFK (Sorry, there are no direct hops to the island from Logan.). Best of all, the big, comfy seats throughout the plane mean the journey is less torturous, and you feel like you're being treated, not cheated. Fares are from $345 round-trip, plus taxes. For more info, call 800-538-2583 or visit www.jetblue.com/vacations.

▶ You don't have to spend a fortune to dine by the sea in Barbados.

Go swanky

Stay at a budget-conscious resort like Almond, but buy a day pass for the swanky Crane Residential Resort. You might be foregoing the legendary Crane's gorgeous rooms, but you can enjoy its restaurants, private beach, beautiful grounds and manicured pools. Add a spa treat, too. For more info, call 800-097-1794 or visit www.thecrane.com.

Go dancing under the stars

Oistins' Friday Night Fish Fry is a cheap dinner with free dancing. Fish straight off the boat are cooked up and served at picnic-style tables. There's the usual sweet Barbados rum punch, local Bank's beer and rum shot shacks, too. A fish platter and a beer costs about $15. There's music all around and pop-up dance floors. (Stay in well-lit areas, though.) At the big stage, anyone can prove their dancing skills — you'd better be exceptionally good, though.

LINDA LABAN
linda.laban@metro.us

Go all-inclusive

Choose an all-inclusive resort and cut out the nasty post-vacation credit card bill. Going all-inclusive means that you know how much you're going to spend up front: Meals and drinks, even alcohol, are included, along with accommodations. There's usually nightly entertainment, too. Almond Resorts has three Barbados properties, each with onsite restaurants, pools and a beach just steps away. Guests can take the complimentary shuttle bus to sister resorts and use the facilities at each for no extra charge. Contact 800-755-6663 or www.almondresorts.com.

CAMBRIDGE COLLEGE EARNS HIGH MARKS FROM UNDERGRADUATES

Cambridge College will be nationally known for providing quality, innovative and relevant higher education opportunities through a student-centered and participatory learning model that empowers our students, enriches our community and transforms the future.

-Cambridge College Vision Statement

Between March 15 and May 16, 2011, all degree-seeking, undergraduate-level Cambridge College students were invited to participate in an Adult Learner Inventory Survey developed jointly by Noel-Levitz and the Council for Adult and Experiential Learning (CAEL). This national survey was created to measure the unique needs of adult undergraduate students. It identifies the importance students place on various aspects of campus life, and measures their satisfaction levels. Among the items that Cambridge College students thought were important (and were most satisfied with) were:

- "The faculty in my program are experts and scholars in their field."
- "My program allows me to pace my studies to fit my life and work schedules."
- "The learning experiences within my program of study challenge me to reach beyond what I know already."
- "My studies are closely related to my life and work goals."
- "My instructors respect student opinions and ideas that differ from their own."
- "Most instructors use a variety of teaching methods."
- "This institution has a diverse student body."
- "I have a clear understanding of what I'm expected to learn in my classes."
- "I am encouraged to apply the classes I've taken toward a degree or certificate."
- "I am able to obtain information I need by phone, fax, email, or online."
- "Processes and procedures for enrolling here are convenient."

Cambridge College is nationally recognized for breaking down barriers in access to quality education. Students who have overcome great challenges have always been central to the College's mission and enjoy a great deal of mentor support. Additionally, the College has been recognized for serving the African-American and Latino communities in New England, and is committed to providing one of the lowest tuition rates among private universities and independent colleges in Massachusetts.

Cambridge College offers bachelor's degree (B.A. and B.S.) programs; master's degree (M.Ed and M.M.) programs in education, psychology, counseling, and management; and a doctor of education (Ed.D.) program in educational leadership, as well as certificates of advanced graduate studies (C.A.G.S.). Students may transfer up to 90 credits from regionally accredited institutions into undergraduate degree programs and 9 or more credits into a master's degree, depending on the program.

Discover Cambridge College for yourself at an information session on Tuesday, July 24th at 6:00 P.M. at the main campus, 1000 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, between Central Square and Harvard Square on the Red Line. For those farther north, the Merrimack Valley campus at 60 Island Street in Lawrence will hold an information session on Tuesday, July 10th: drop in anytime between 4:00 and 7:00 p.m.

Graduate Education - The Ultimate Renewable Resource

MASSACHUSETTS Maritime Academy

Massachusetts Maritime Academy's Graduate and Continuing Education Division offers two unique graduate programs: A Master of Science Degree in Facilities Management and a Master of Science Degree in Emergency Management

Both programs are customized for the working executive and are based on a cohort model where students attend class at the Conference Center at Waltham Woods for 31 half-weekends (Friday night and Saturday), every other weekend over 17 months. The program includes a laptop computer, software, textbooks, case packets, breakfast, lunch and dinner, all coffee breaks and Friday night hotel accommodations at the Doubletree Guest Suites in Waltham, Ma.

The mission of the MMA MS programs is to give graduate students the knowledge and skills necessary to become creative problem solvers and in doing so provide current and prospective facility managers and emergency responders with the personal, interpersonal, and group skills necessary to craft and implement creative ideas and thus reduce the gap between good ideas and accepted practices.

The programs forge home the idea that good ideas are not enough (everybody has one) and that implementation is what separates excellence in management and leadership from mediocrity.

If you would like to apply for entrance into next year's program beginning in the Fall 2011 send:

1. A short (300 word max) statement of your professional objectives and how the program will help you meet them.
2. Your resume.
3. Your undergraduate transcript to jmcdonald@maritime.edu

And then fill out the online application at: http://mxapps.maritime.edu/Grad-Application/

Suffolk's Executive MBA Prepares Tomorrow's Leaders

Designed specifically for busy mid-career executives and professionals who aspire to greater leadership responsibility, the Suffolk Executive MBA is a 21-month,Saturday only program. The Executive MBA program emphasizes leadership and global perspectives, in a team-centric cohort structure comprised of working professionals that promotes the personal development of each student. Students learn from a distinguished faculty as well as from classmates whose variety of backgrounds and distinct experiences also provide a wide array of opportunities for networking.

Extensive training, with leadership development through managerial, teambuilding, policy, and global business residential seminars, prepares Suffolk students of today to become the leaders of tomorrow. As a member of the Executive MBA network, students gain immediate access to a diverse and influential group of alumni through our dedicated Executive Program Alumni Council, as well as the ability to audit any Executive MBA course without tuition upon completion of the program.

The Suffolk Executive MBA—A Different Kind of MBA Experience.

SUFFOLK
UNIVERSITY
SAWYER BUSINESS SCHOOL

Do you have a head for business and a heart for healthcare?

Melanie Donnelly, a program administrator at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, enrolled in Suffolk's Master of Health Administration (MHA) program to complement her professional experience and advance her career. "Suffolk's curriculum and flexible course offerings sparked my interest more than other program," she said.

With over six years of industry experience, Donnelly is gaining a broader understanding of healthcare. "My classes at Suffolk have opened my eyes to the big and complex world of healthcare," she said.

The combination of a large aging baby-boomer population and longer life expectancy is having a major impact on the medical industry. According to the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment for medical and health services managers is expected to grow by 22 percent from 2010 to 2020. Consequently, leaders who can handle diverse challenges, including adapting to healthcare reform, improving quality and controlling costs, and managing continual innovations, will be in high demand.

"The healthcare programs can be tailored to meet your career needs," Donnelly explained. Some of her classmates are earning an MBA/Health degree or completing a health career track within the Master of Public Administration (MPA) program.

Donnelly enjoys learning about her professors' varied industry experience. "Faculty bring the real world into the classroom by way of their personal experiences and through guest speakers. They are fantastic about incorporating current events into lectures and discussions, so I always feel like I'm in the know," Donnelly said.

The dedicated faculty prepares students to be effective change leaders in an evolving industry. "Faculty members support us in any way that they can, and they truly care about the success of each student," said Donnelly.

Classes are held at Suffolk University's campus in downtown Boston, among the most prominent healthcare centers in the world. "When it comes to healthcare, there's no better place to be. Suffolk is located in the heart of it all, and it offers a diverse community of students to learn from," said MHA student Ross Schultz.

Schultz, who has an undergraduate degree economics and management, is new to the healthcare field. "I have always had a strong interest in both leadership and finance, so administration seemed like a natural fit."

For MHA student Dren Ibrani, the "real-world applicability" of the programs is an integral part of his professional development. "The internship and mentorship opportunities that are available through Suffolk are amazing." He recently started a two-month internship at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, where he focuses on patient engagement. "You really get to apply and see results of the things that you learned in class," he said.

Ibrani is also participating in the Mentor Program, which matches new students with experienced healthcare professionals, most of whom are MHA alumni. Ibrani's mentor has offered continuous support, connected him to healthcare leaders, and helped him discover his interest in patient-centered care.

"Suffolk prepares students to become successful leaders and innovators in healthcare. I would recommend this program to anyone who is passionate about healthcare, values continuous learning, and wants a better understanding of the very complex healthcare environment," said Schultz, who is interning in the Department of Surgery at Brigham and Women's Hospital

New England's Best Kept Secret

NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE OF BUSINESS AND FINANCE

The rising cost of college tuition has been a concern in the United States for some time now. Top that with the current economic situation, the old adage of "saving for my college tuition" for most has become a dream.

A comparison of inflation statistics from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the College Board reveals that since 1978, the cost of attendance at community colleges and 4-year public and private colleges and universities has tripled, with tuition increases rising at an average of double the general inflation rate.

In today's competitive business world, a college degree is extremely important, now more than ever. So what's the answer? Should you just accept the fact that you will need to go into debt, with thousands if not hundreds of thousands of dollars in student loans? Not so Fast!

New England College of Business and Finance (NECB) offers affordable online degree programs which have evolved over 100 years of educating successful business professionals - without breaking the bank. In fact, the reason NECB had been a secret is that it had historically been the preferred college by the banking and financial services industry which relied on the College to educate its workforce from tellers to senior management and which almost exclusively made up its student body. A few years ago the College decided to broaden its focus to the larger business community with excellent new programs, including the nation's first and only Master of Science in Business Ethics and Compliance. But, NECB never lost its commitment to providing affordable education and, in fact, in 2011 the U.S. Department of Education named NECB the most affordable private college in New England.

New England College of Business and Finance (NECB) is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) and licensed by the Massachusetts Department of Higher Education. NECB offers a range of undergraduate and graduate programs in general business and finance, and in various specializations. NECB was one of the region's first adopters of online academic delivery and fully comports with best practices established by the Council of Regional Accrediting Commissions. NECB students consistently rank programs and services at the College well above nationally normed benchmarks.

So there you have it. High quality online degree programs at an affordable cost. Does it get any better than that? Actually it does. For over a century, NECB has actively partnered with corporations to help them achieve their educational goals. A corporate partnership with NECB is the perfect way to extend additional education benefits to employees at no cost to the organization. Employees and immediate family members of NECB's partner organizations have access to preferred NECB tuition rates, which equate to about a 25% tuition reduction from NECB's already affordable rates.

So as you can see, NECB is truly one of New England's best kept secrets. For more information, visit their website at www.necb.edu. If you believe your company may be interested in a corporate partnership, call their Partner Development Team at 617-603-6900.

Passion Comes To Life at

The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts

Where are you happier—behind a desk, or in the kitchen? Have you always felt that you were born to file and fax, or might your true calling involve something a bit more expressive? If food is your passion, pursue your new career at The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts.

Established by Chef Roberta Dowling in 1974, The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts seeks to stimulate the senses as it helps students discover beauty and complexity within the world of food. Students are encouraged to explore all aspects of fine food and its preparation as they learn to produce dishes that demonstrate technical and scientific mastery. The education received at The CSCA provides each student with a lasting legacy of culinary knowledge that reflects common sense, diversity of culinary expression, and above all—the notion that food is a celebration of life.

Four unique program offerings make up the curriculum at The CSCA: the 37-week Professional Chef's and Professional Pastry programs, as well as the 16-week Culinary Certificate and Certificate Pastry programs. All programs place strong emphasis on both modern and classical culinary techniques and are taught by a talented staff of chef instructors from around the world. Pastry classes are highlighted by the addition of instructor and Program Director Delphin Gomes, New England's only French Master Pastry Chef. A flexible day and evening schedule allows students to work full- or part-time while attending, and class size is limited to allow for intimate, hands-on instruction. Applications for September enrollment are now being accepted for all programs.

In addition to culinary training programs, The CSCA offers an extensive recreational program for food enthusiasts. These one-time classes cover a wide range of subject matter and are designed to introduce the amateur chef to the world of specialty cooking. Whether you want to impress your friends and family with a gourmet meal, perfect your pie crust, or discover the secrets of a well-seasoned sauce—there are classes to meet every need.

The CSCA is offering its first-ever Food Writing Workshop during the week of August 6, 2012. Our award-winning instructor Susan G. Purdy will lead participants through food writing exercises for publication, blogs, cookbooks, and menu writing/restaurant reviews. Details at www.cambridgeculinary.com.

The School is hosting an excursion to Spain in September. Led by CSCA chefs Roberta Dowling and Gerard Lopez the trip visits Barcelona, Pamplona, the Basque Coast, and other towns in the Basque region. Details at www.cambridgeculinary.com.

The CSCA is currently accepting applications for all September 2012 certificate and professional programs. For more detailed information about these and many other program offerings, or to sign up for an Information Session on the evening of Thursday June 28th at 6:00pm, please visit www.cambridgeculinary.com or call 617.354.2020.

Emmanuel College's Graduate Programs in Research Administration a Means to Advancement, Says Faculty Member

Those working in the dynamic world of research administration impact some of the largest global health and social initiatives in the country. Emmanuel College's Graduate and Professional Programs respond to the specific needs of these administrators with specialized graduate programs that address the competencies sought for sponsored research professionals at hospitals, colleges and universities. Emmanuel's graduate programs in research administration provide an opportunity to earn an academic credential and to expand professional networks. Below, Adjunct Professor Jeff Seo, a research administration attorney working in the Longwood Medical and Academic Area (LMA), discusses Emmanuel College's Graduate Certificate and Master's Degree programs in Research Administration.

How do Emmanuel College's Graduate Programs in Research Administration add value to the field?

"The programs legitimize and professionalize a field that has been steadily growing over the past few decades in conjunction with an increased investment in federally funded research. Research administrators play a vital role as stewards of these research funds, yet with the expansion of these 'hot jobs' some people simply 'fall into' these roles. Now, Emmanuel College's Graduate Programs in Research Administration provide a means by which individuals can seriously explore the transition into research administration or further advance their careers in research administration."

How does the research administration curriculum allow students to apply concepts practically?

"Students gain a fundamental understanding of the major accounting, finance, regulatory and compliance issues affecting federally funded grants and contracts. Through a rigorous curriculum, created by sponsored research experts from the neighboring LMA institutions and beyond, students acquire an appreciation for these issues and the ability to readily identify them from an investigator perspective, in addition to gaining an administrator's perspective in an academic and health care setting. In-class discussions, case studies and exercises are designed to elicit debate, helping students with the all-important skills of listening and communicating, as well as being able to identify their audience, whether it is an investigator, a colleague or classmate, and to tailor their message accordingly."

How are the research administration course requirements appropriate and relevant to students?

"These convenient, accelerated programs are especially designed to foster leaders in research administration. Coursework and assessments are tailored around current issues in research, including recent enforcement actions and new regulations, which students can immediately apply to their current positions in research administration."

What research administration networking opportunities are available for students?

"Students become very close with their classmates in their cohorts. In the face-to-face format, they immediately get to meet individuals from various for-profit and nonprofit research and health care institutions. For those enrolled in the online program, their cohort may include individuals from across the country. Our students represent employers such as Tufts Medical School, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Mass General Hospital, Harvard University, MD Anderson Cancer Center, Cincinnati Children's Hospital, Georgia Tech, Johns Hopkins University, Emory University, and the University of Texas. These connections are invaluable and likely to continue long after students complete their certificate or master's degree. Additionally, Emmanuel College instructors are leaders in their respective and diverse fields and can serve as a long-term networking source. I personally know that a few students have already advanced their careers simply by meeting others through the program."

What advice do you have for someone looking to transition into or advance within the field of research administration?

"There is no traditional route by which one becomes introduced to research administration. If you are eager to learn, I recommend exploring opportunities such as Emmanuel College's Graduate Programs in Research Administration. I am confident that the demand for good research and grant administrators will only continue to grow."

Attend an upcoming information session or webinar about the Graduate Programs in Research Administration:

Spurs to make play for Garnett?

San Antonio is interested in pairing longtime rivals Kevin Garnett and Tim Duncan, according to the San Antonio Express-News. Last month, Sports Illustrated's Chris Ballard wrote, "Duncan hates Kevin Garnett. Hates him the way liberals hate Sean Hannity."

Dolphins work out Ochocinco

The Miami Dolphins hosted a tryout for Chad Ochocinco, who was released last week by the AFC East rival Patriots.

Miami would make sense as a landing spot for No. 85 as he is from South Florida and the Dolphins recently traded Brandon Marshall. METRO

Names, names and more names for C's

Celtics have found solid players late in the draft • Big Baby Davis, Delonte West, Avery Bradley were all late picks • 2012 field is loaded

We likely won't know whether or not Kevin Garnett or Ray Allen will be back in green for weeks if not months.

That's not to say that the next 30 days won't be jam-packed with Celtics news. The NBA draft takes place June 28, July 1 is when teams may begin talking to free agents and July 11 is the date when teams may begin to sign coveted players.

So we won't have to wait long to find out which direction the franchise intends to go.

Thanks to the Kendrick Perkins-Jeff Green swap in February 2011, the Celtics have an extra draft pick to work with this summer.

A look at potential draft picks the Celtics could be looking at:

Doron Lamb, SG, Kentucky
Yes, the Celtics will likely be looking for big bodies but going the Kentucky rout is never a bad thing these days. Lamb, a very good midrange shooter, could be a solid option to back up Avery Bradley at the two-guard position.

GETTY IMAGES

Austin Rivers took in a Celtics game in late April.

2012 NBA draft

Other potential Celtics' targets:

- Meyers Leonard 7-foot-1 center out of Illinois
- Festus Ezeli 6-foot-11 center from Vanderbilt
- Fab Melo Center from Syracuse was suspended for the Orange's run in March
- Draymond Green Michigan State player could be a great NBA role player
- Arnett Moultrie Out of Mississippi State, Moultrie owns an NBA-ready frame
- Royce White The versatile big man led Iowa State to the NCAA tournament.

Perry Jones, PF, Baylor
If he was to be drafted by the Celtics, by Christmas Tommy Heinsohn would inevitably compare Jones to some guy named Kevin Garnett. He's 6-foot-11, he's extremely athletic and owns a nice inside-outside game. There's a better chance Jones becomes the next Acie Earl instead of the next Garnett, but one can dream.

Andrew Nicholson, PF, St. Bonaventure
The always reliable NBADraft.net has Nicholson heading to the Celtics at 21. He's a senior, so he'll be more mature than most of the players in the draft. But he often gets moved off the block due to lack of strength — in the A-10 of all places.

Jared Sullinger, PF, Ohio State
This one's a long shot as the only way the Celtics could get ahold of Sullinger is via a trade (two picks for one?) or if he somehow slides epically. Right now, he's believed to be going in the 8-14 range.

Austin Rivers, SG, Duke
Another pipe dream, though could this be one of the reasons as to why Doc Rivers improbably signed that contract last spring? Was Doc promised by Danny Ainge he would do everything in his power to go after boy wonder in the draft? Would Avery Bradley and a draft pick be enough for one of the teams in the 10-15 range to bite?

Doc's son is criticized for sometimes being too selfish with the ball. Who better to correct that than his own dad?

WELCOME TO THE SHOW

Durant, James highlight what should be epic NBA Finals ◗ Pair played against each other in offseason ◗ Both looking for elusive, first NBA title

With all apologies to Boston and San Antonio, this is what the rest of America wanted. The fans. The commissioner. The players themselves.

"It's only right," LeBron James said of the Heat and Thunder meeting in the NBA Finals. "It's only right."

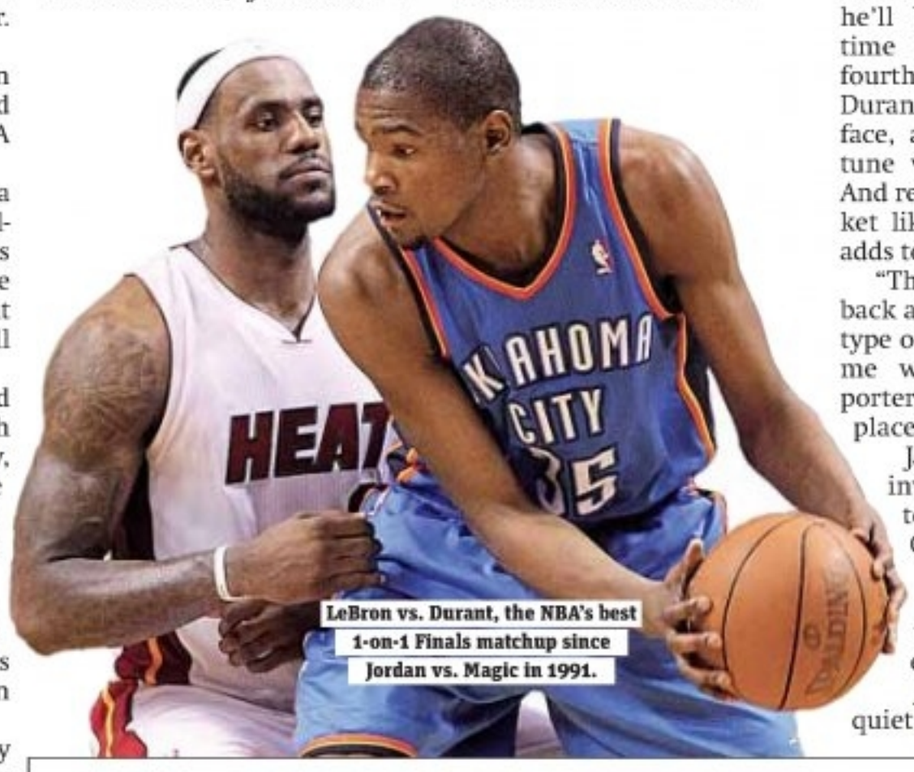
James is the NBA MVP, a three-time league MVP actually. On the other side stands Kevin Durant, a three-time scoring champion. They might be the two best basketball players in the world.

"It's not about Kevin and LeBron," said Thunder coach Scott Brooks. "Individually, they're the best players in the league. But it's always about the Thunder against the Heat."

Sorry, coach. Even if Durant and James don't guard each other often, this series is still very much about Kevin and LeBron.

The two imagined this day in the offseason, when they competed against one another in a four-day series of workouts that they dubbed "Hell Week." James and Durant walked away from that with a mutual respect. Now, they are set to meet again, on the biggest stage: the NBA Finals. Not even Martin Scorsese could have scripted this any better.

"I envisioned it every day we worked out," James said. "I understood what his [Durant's] passion was. I understood what his drive was."



LeBron vs. Durant, the NBA's best 1-on-1 Finals matchup since Jordan vs. Magic in 1991.

James is the man everyone loves to hate. With his perceived cockiness and bravado, he'll be picked apart each time he disappears in the fourth quarter. Meanwhile, Durant enters as the fresh face, a player very much in tune with his surroundings. And representing a small market like Oklahoma City only adds to his likeability.

"The city is just so laid-back and quiet, and that's the type of person I am and it fits me well," Durant told reporters. "It's just a perfect place to be."

James and the Heat are invading that sleepy town tonight (9 p.m., ABC), in Game 1 of the NBA Finals. As the eyes and ears of the hoops world turn to Oklahoma City, expect a lot of things.

Just don't expect it to be quiet. METRO

Key matchups

Kevin Durant vs. LeBron James

The scoop: They probably won't be matched up on defense as much as we'd like, but these two might be the top 2 players in the league. Both will score in bunches, but which one makes the biggest shots with the game on the line?

Serge Ibaka vs. Chris Bosh

The scoop: The best shot-blocker in the NBA versus maybe the most versatile low-post scorer. Ibaka is great at help defense, so Bosh should stick to his face-up game whenever possible. Don't bother playing the tough guy by going right at Ibaka. If Bosh sticks to his short jumper, he'll be fine.

Russell Westbrook vs. Mario Chalmers

The scoop: Two guys who came from the same draft class in 2008. There's a reason Westbrook was a high first-rounder and Chalmers went in the second. Chalmers will make a 3-pointer here and there, but Westbrook is capable of going for 30 with regularity.

Thabo Sefolosha vs. Dwyane Wade

The scoop: Sefolosha will have the sad duty of trying to guard Wade. Sefolosha is quickly becoming one of the NBA's best perimeter defenders. But D-Wade is a proven NBA champion.

OKC bench vs. Miami bench

The scoop: James Harden. James Harden. James Harden. How does Miami counter his production alone? It won't be easy. They'll need to get something out of Mike Miller and Shane Battier.

'Humbled' to be back in NBA Finals

LeBron James admitted yesterday that he let his teammates down last year. He averaged just 17.6 points against Dallas in the NBA Finals.

"I'm happy and I'm humbled that I can actually be back in this position less than 12 months later and to do a better job of making more plays on a bigger stage," James told reporters.

Quoted

"We didn't come here to win one championship ... not two, not three, not four, not five, not six, not seven."

Patriots sign former reality show star

The Patriots signed former reality show star Jesse Holley yesterday along with offensive lineman Mike Ingersoll and rookie free agent tight end Tyler Urban just prior to the start of the team's minicamp today.

Holley was featured on former Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin's reality show "4th and Long" in 2009. The winner of the reality show went on to earn an invite to Cowboys training camp. Holley proved to be more than a media creation, sticking with Dallas for three seasons. He caught seven balls in 2012 for 169 yards and played a big role on Dallas' special teams units.

Ingersoll was cut by Kansas City in 2011 and Urban went undrafted in this year's NFL draft. METRO/MB
